Calvary Baptist Sunday School Opens
Year's Work, Honoring Memory of Supt. Pierson H. Bristow.

2,502 MEMBERS ARE ENROLLED

With an attendance that filled the church auditorium to its capacity, the autumnal rally of Calvary Baptist Sunday school was held yesterday morning, inaugurating another season's work. Despite a minor note of sadness on account of the recent loss of the superintendent, Pierson H. Bristow, the service was marked by enthusiasm when the larger fields of service were pointed out.

The beautiful flag of the adult department and the various other department banners were displayed and the platform was transformed into a bower of palms and roses. The service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Dr. S. H. Greene, who is now acting superintendent of the Sunday school. In his "Call to Service" he said, in part:

As we face the work of the autumn and winter we realize that while man continues to come and go beside the sea and the mountain, while human faces in the procession are continually changing, yet the mountain and the sea abide forever—and so it is in the work of the kingdom of God. It is the call of duty; it is the call to the colors; it is the hour of mighty inspiration and possibility.

of fathers and mothers in teaching the children of the Christ who called them to Him and blessed them. We enter into our Lord's work as we see those little lives that hold in their tiny hands the great tomorrow, and present them for our Lord's service. There is no sweeter, larger work in all the world. It is the call for the young men and young women of America today, many of them far from the home roof—for us to be better or sister to the stranger within our city and do the Christlike work for them.

"And we are responsible too for the men and women of mature age. The Sunday school of today means more than the little children and a few pious women; it means the womanhood, those who bear the heat and burden of the day, to give to the truth that makes them free, and shall keep them from sin. This work extends into the various fields of activity where men and women are toiling today, and it is no small part of this work plays in the actual, practical struggles of life.

"We have heard the call. Who will respond? Who will yield his life and sing himself yet largely into the service of the King during the coming year?"

N. S. Faucett responded on behalf of the general assembly of the Sunday school. Additional responses were made by E. G. Mason for the junior department, B. C. Gettenger for the intermediate, Miss Lydia Marshall for the primary department, Miss Marie Pearce for the kindergarten, Mrs. H. M. Kendrick for the home department, Iven W. Phillips for Memorial Chapel, and J. Barrett Carter for the Chinese school.

A scripture lesson was read by Prof. Louis D. Billas and prayer was offered by Dr. H. H. Kimball. Three of the songs which the school sang were written by Mr. Bristow, the late superintendent, and commemorative resolutions which the board of officers and teachers have passed were read by Mr. George H. Judd.

The total attendance, representing five of the eight departments, was 1,330. The total enrollment of the school is now 2,502, with 125 officers and teachers in all. Class No. 12, taught by Dr. P. J. Swartwout, numbers about 300, and the Vaughn class of men is considerably larger. The receipts for the past year were about $7,000.

The committee in charge was Nathan S. Faucett, Miss Mary E. Bond, Miss Sarah E. White, M. Barlow Mercer, Miss Helen Myers, Miss F. M. Hoadley, and Miss Isabel Aldridge. The music, under the direction of Prof. Louis A. Potter, Jr., George H. Judd, and Mrs. M. Barlow Mercer, included several numbers by a women's chorus of fourteen voices with orchestra accompaniment.

SUPREME COURT CRITICISED.

Veto Power Declared Usurpation by Speaker Before Secular League.

In an address before the Washington Secular League at Pythian Temple yesterday afternoon on "The Usurpation of the Veto Power by the United States Supreme Court," William Macon Coleman severely arraigned the function exercised by the Supreme Court of passing upon the constitutionality of acts of Congress and pronounced it a clear usurpation without warrant in the Constitution.

He contended that this usurped power has been and continues to be used to the detriment of democracy and the welfare of the people as a whole. By the exercise of this power the Supreme Court, the speaker declared, is the bulwark and citadel of special privileges. The speaker supported his contentions by an able historical review of the Supreme Court and the assertion and exercise of the veto power.

Mr. Coleman held that this power could be taken away, and should be taken away, by act of Congress, the power not having been vested by the Constitution in the court. He advocated as a necessary reform with respect to the judiciary the election of judges by the people and the limitation of their tenure to a term of years.

BULK OF INDIAN ARMY FROM PUNJAB PROVINCE

French Governor First to Use Sepoys in Battle—Belief in Heaven for Heroes in Action Makes Them Hard to Beat.

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The coming of the Indian troops to fight in France recalls to mind that it was a Frenchman who first organized the natives of Hindustan to go to war in European fashion and for Europeans. It was M. Duplex, the able and ambitious governor of Pondicherry, who employed French officers to form the natives into companies of fixed strength and with a regular organization, uniformly clothed and paid and equipped and accoutred.

This was back in the old days of the eighteenth century, when France and Great Britain still disputed for the great prize of India.

Called Them Sepahis.

His new force Gov. Duplex called Sepahis, or Sepoys, and the system proved such a success that it was soon imitated by the English.

The first troops raised by the British were dressed in white jackets and short breeches, with the legs bare and the feet shod with sandals. The headgear was a cloth turban made up on a frame, with a brass boss on the crown. The uniform was gradually brought to European styles, but even when the shako had been introduced there was one feature the Hindu never wear—the leather peak. The Indian soldier will wear nothing of the kind.

The bulk of the Indian army is from the single province of the Punjab. The Punjab, whether Pathan, Punjabi, Musulman, Sikh or Dogra, is an excellent soldier. He is not superior to the Gurkha, but most of the Gurkhas are not British subjects. They are mercenaries from Nepal, the mountain state to the north.

Many Used During Century.

This was not the first time the native troops of India have been utilized for service in other countries. As far back as 1801 a force took part in the operations against the French in Egypt and accompanied the army in its memorable march across the desert from Kossair to the Nile. Others saw fighting in the Maritzburg, Java, expeditions in 1819 and 1821; in the Chinese "opium war" of 1840-42; in the Abyssinian expedition of 1867; the Egyptian war of 1882, and some noncombatant details even were sent to the Boer war.

The first force now dispatched to France consists, according to best advice, of two divisions—a cavalry division and two troops. There seems almost no limit to the number of men India can supply.

An Englishman who has spent some time in India gives the following tribute to the Indian troops:

"Finer fellows than the soldiers of our crack native corps, irrespective of caste, race, sect, or creed, simply do not exist. I do not differentiate between Gurkhas, Sikhs, Rajputs, Pathans, Punjabis, or Mahometans. There is no need to do so. Led by British officers, they are each as effective a fighting force as is to be found in any regiment."

Have Fighting Record.

"It is true that the softer Madras cannot be classed with the Gurkhas, the harder brethren north of a line drawn roughly from Poona to Calcutta, but even granting this much in favor of the more brilliant north, the record of the Madras Sappers and Miners is one which may belie this facile 'Johnny' would fight side by side with a battalion of moths—if they were British ones!"

A dead shot with his 'kukri,' with its laurel leaf-shaped blade, he can slay only with it, but can fling it accurately. One can imagine him clipping off the balls from cover-point with one! The German crown prince discovered in India that 'Johnny' Gurkha fears neither man nor devil. He may be long detected that the little brown man in the green kit is not a native even if his opponent is a German.

Wanted Tobacco Badly.

"The Gurkha's handiness with his 'kukri' reminds me of the true story of a villager in the Rewah State. He was a subject of the Maharajah who has offered even his jewels to our righteous cause. This man, armed only with a short 'kukhari' (Anglicized: ax) was in the line beating up a tiger through dense jungle.

"Finding he had dropped his limited supply of tobacco, he retraced his steps a short way to try to find it. Friend tiger availed himself of this gap in the line to break back. Our hero spotted him just in time, and crouching behind a bush with his ax uplifted, hit the tiger a crack on the skull as he was slinking by.

"As vegetarians, the Rajputs are not so easy to feed on active service, but lack of flesh food does not impair their fighting qualities. Finely built, and as sturdy as any one could wish, these men go into battle guided by one rule. That is: 'No surrender.'"

Believe Heaven for Heroes.

"It was never my good fortune to meet Sir Pertab Singh, but who is there who has lived in India who has not heard of this courtier and sportsman? The man who is first in the field when the pluck is at stake, as he used to be, will not be far behind when the quarry are Germans. Better even than polo is pig-sticking a school for active mounted service.

"And what of the Sikhs? For physique, pluck, endurance and character, nothing the allies can place in the field will make these grand, bearded fellows take second place. They have a great fondness for wrestling, weight-lifting and sports and games of all kinds.

"Since a much better time is promised in the hereafter to all devout Mahometans who die fighting than that which they are able to obtain on earth, the prospects of any German regiments that run up against those of our I. E. F., which comprise those men, are not rosy."

ADDRESSES SECULAR LEAGUE.

"The Usurpation of the Veto Power by the United States Supreme Court," was the subject of an address by William Macon Coleman, before the Washington Secular League, in Pythian Temple, yesterday afternoon.

SAYS WAR WILL BE DOWNFALL OF SATAN

W. E. Van Amberg Believes After All Is Over People Will Cry for Permanent Peace.

That the terrible war now raging in Europe is a lesson to the world, of the horror of sin, was the declaration made by W. E. Van Amberg in his address, "After the War—What?" to the Washington Temple Congregation, in Masonic Temple, yesterday afternoon. "It is a struggle between the two great principles, right and wrong, and will mark," he declared, "the downfall of the kingdom of Satan."

Mr. Van Amberg said that not one-third of the men engaged in that terrible struggle know what they are fighting for. "It is simply their so-called loyalty and patriotism that is leading them blindly to do the will of their rulers."

Wanted Tobacco Badly.

"The Gurkha's handiness with his 'kukri' reminds me of the true story of a villager in the Rewah State. He was a subject of the Maharajah who has offered even his jewels to our righteous cause. "The Usurpation of the Veto Power by the United States Supreme Court," was the subject of an address by William Macon Coleman, before the Washington Secular League, in Pythian Temple, yesterday afternoon.

This war, he said, will mark the end of all monarchies forever.

"It will end," he declared, "in all nations agreeing to disarmament, and will make men so sick of war's terrible results that they will willingly cry for permanent peace."

VESPER SERVICES AT Y. W. C. A.

"The greatest need in the home at the present day is a little more of that old-fashioned piety," said Rev. Dr. Jay T. Stocking, in his address to the Young Women's Christian Association, yesterday afternoon. "It is simply their so-called loyalty and patriotism that is leading them blindly to do the will of their rulers."

5% FOR COTTON ESSAY WINNER.

Mrs. Henry T. Graves Offers Gold Judgement for School Children.

Mrs. Henry T. Graves, brother of Col. John Temple Graves, has offered a special prize of $5 in gold to the District of Columbia school child which sent in the best 300-word essay in the recent contest.

The winning of his special prize does not debar the fortunate one from taking a national prize if his essay merits it. It is simply a fourth chance for the Washington school children to win prizes with their cotton essays.

The response from Washington school children to the offer made recently by Miss Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Smith, through the National Cotton Fashions Show, of $20, $10, and $5 in gold for the best 300-word essays on "The Cotton Plant and Its Uses" has been most gratifying.

The contest will close today and immediately the judges will begin the difficult task of picking the prize-winning essays.
